

BECOMING A LIFE COACH

The job of a Life Coach offers the individual a challenging platform to make a significant difference in the lives of other people. It is a form of consultancy but the significant difference is that while a consultancy is a generic form of rendering service to corporate concerns, the Life Coach gives services primarily to individuals.

A life coach works through a creative process that helps the client to improve his/her personal life, as well as his/her professional image or career. Coaches help clients reach decisions and find goals by asking the client questions about what they want and helping clients to discover what they want on their own. A coach will help the client in many areas of their lives, and provide support for the client as they work.
